

Loneliness isn't always a bad thing

The world is a lonely place everyone needs someone in their live to tell them how their day went or just someone to talk to in general. Lennie and George are perceived as lonely people in 'Of Mice and Men.' Many people ^{Italicize} ~~don't~~ ^{do not} understand how difficult life is. (Like George's decision to kill Lennie.) ^{Fragment} It had to be hard for him ~~but he grew a pair~~ ^{did not} and did it so Curley or Carlson ~~didn't~~ kill him like they did for Candy's dog. George and Lennie were always lonely people, Lennie had to fixate on something to get rid of unwanted feelings, and Curley's wife kept reminding herself of how lonely she is and on how her past ruined her future. ^{Thats?}

Lennie and George are lonely people. They only have themselves (in their state) ^{Introduce} against the world. "Lennie crawled slowly and cautiously around the fire until he was close to George" (Steinbeck 12). ^{tries} Lennie ~~tried~~ to stay close to George even when he was mad he knows that George is his only friend and is the only person in this world that is there for him so he tries to stay on his good side and stay close to him. ^{Introduce article's author here} "as the power of society formed of nature's baser forces to destroy this finer human spirit" (article 216). Lennie and George had to face ^{Johnson} ~~them~~ ^{who?} ~~vs.~~ ^{against} ~~the world~~ and it was hard because Lennie ^{has} ~~had~~ problems and George ^{has} ~~had~~ to deal with ^{it all} ~~Lennie and all his problems.~~ ^{Topic?}

(Find something to obsess with to hide loneliness.) Lennie ^{has} ~~had~~ to find mice and rabbits to pet and have close to him because he ^{knows} ~~knew~~ George ^{is not} ~~wasn't~~ always there for him and he ^{is not} ~~wasn't~~ always going to be there for him. He showed ^s his love and affection not only to George, but to the rabbits, mice, and the puppies. He may have killed most of them but he ^{does not} ~~didn't~~ mean to, he had to ^{Introduce, who is saying this?} ~~much~~ love and he crushed them. "don't you think of nothing but rabbits?" "we gonna have a